LAMBETH CONFERENCE
God's Church for God's world

Lambeth

By Nicholas Dill

Bishop of Bermuda/Dean of the Anglican Cathedral of the Most Holy Trinity

Welcome to the first edition of our new diocesan monthly newsletter. I hope it will provide an opportunity to encourage, inform and inspire us as we work together across the Island in sharing the good news of God's love.

My wife Fiona and I have recently returned from the Lambeth Conference held in Canterbury, England – the home of the Church of England and the Anglican Communion worldwide – held once every 10 years.

For the next few months in this newsletter, we will focus on some of our experiences - the things we learned which we hope will benefit the church in Bermuda.

It was an awesome time, meeting with over 1,400 people over 12 intense and full days – 650 of whom were Anglican bishops alongside spouses, observers from a multitude of other denominations and a crew of volunteers from around the world. We were led by Archbishop Justin Welby and met and worshipped together in large plenary groups, in times of worship, in bishop-and-spouse-only gatherings, in small bible study groups and over each meal.

The book of Revelation in the Bible describes a gathering in heaven of every tribe, race and tongue – and this conference was a foretaste of that, for sure. On the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came, he enabled those gathered in Jerusalem to hear the Gospel in their own mother tongue – and throughout our conference there was simultaneous translation of each session in French, Spanish, Portuguese, Swahili, Korean, Japanese, Juba Arabic and Burmese.

I was anxious before going that we would be divided as a communion over a number of political and cultural issues, but it soon became apparent that the Holy Spirit was at work as the word of God came alive and people's hearts were opened not only to hear from God but to listen deeply to one another.

I was humbled and inspired and have found my faith renewed in God and his church. I have a real sense of privilege to be called as part of his family to work alongside Him and brothers and sisters around the world in the work of evangelism and discipleship; in providing a safe church, where peace and reconciliation, unity, environmental concern and engagement, a sense of identity, hospitality and proper relationships with other faiths were seen as paramount concerns of the church.

Two things stood out for me: firstly, from our study of scripture together from the first letter of Peter, where we met and shared in small groups from diverse backgrounds – praying with one another, sharing our lives with joy and tears and secondly, the stories of faith, life and growth from around the communion, often in situations of suffering, conflict, persecution, climate-change crisis and want – but in spite of such things life, growth, hope and joy!

These will remain with me forever. But it has also renewed my concern for our diocese. We learned that where churches had become introspective or concerned with their self-preservation – in 'maintenance mode' – they did not flourish. Where, however, churches stepped out in mission to the world around them and boldly and lovingly shared the good news, intentionally making not just converts but disciples who would bring faith into all of life – there the church is healthy and has become a place of healing and transformation not just for the members but society at large.

Over the next few months, I will be sharing more about our experiences and looking at some of the things that we can learn from and grow into, but for now, I want to leave us with a challenge taken from an address given by the Archbishop of York.

We know that Rolex makes watches, Starbucks make coffee, MacDonald's makes hamburgers. What does the church make? The answer is disciples; and what do disciples make? They make peace, transformation of life and.... more disciples – not converts or church goers, but people who joyfully and whole heartedly follow Jesus in every sphere of their lives, constantly learning and growing. We as The Church have been concerned with our preservation, fearful of trying anything new, or reaching out. Our spiritual lives are often treading water. Each of us has to be a disciple who reaches out – an evangelist. Though that word is scary, it contains within it the little word 'angel' – meaning messenger. We are to be messengers.

Tyrants cause trouble; vagabonds make mischief, the Devil causes mayhem – but the Church of Jesus Christ is to declare the praises of him who brought us out of darkness into his marvellous light. We are to be disciples, and as disciples to make peace. Will you join me in a renewed commitment to be and to make disciples!

Zoom Group

Lambeth started 18 months prior to the actual conference, meeting in Zoom with bishops from around the world. On our first day, we gathered in our Zoom groups in person. The people in the picture, above, are from that group. We had participants from Panama, Jamaica, Chile, Argentina, South Africa, Canada and the U.S. Hidden behind is that 'bye from Bermuda'.

My Experience

Lambeth...

Like a spiritual
on steroids

I really wasn't sure what to expect from the Lambeth Conference. I was absolutely looking forward to it, as I was anticipating that it would be like a spiritual retreat. The opportunity for Nick and I to spend some time alone together for 12 days was a bonus! Well, it was like a spiritual retreat ... on steroids. There were so many opportunities for learning, praying, connection, relationship, community and just plain joy in the Lord.

There are a couple of things that I would like to share with you now, but I hope to have the opportunity to share more with you in the future.

Firstly, when you are sitting in Canterbury Cathedral with 650 Anglican bishops and their spouses from every corner of the world, choristers and ecumenical clergy, you cannot help but feel that you are part of something historic, something extraordinary, something momentous and life changing. I recognised it in the moment, as an amazing privilege and probably for the first time in my Christian life, which started when I was 24, I felt truly proud to be an Anglican.

Many of you will be familiar with the concept that we as Anglicans in Bermuda are often known by other denominations as the 'frozen chosen', because of the way we worship. Well, let me tell you, we were not the 'frozen chosen' as Anglicans at Lambeth. When Anglicans from every nation and culture come together there is an explosion of joy, wonder and worship. We in the Anglican Diocese of Bermuda have much to gain from exposing ourselves to other ways of worship and glorifying God – so watch this space!

Secondly, during the conference I was made aware of just how significant and important the Anglican church is to the daily experience of life for so many in our world, whether it was through the Mother's Union, through church schools or universities, feeding programs, environmental concerns and ... the list goes on.

I was aware of being part of something which, through the Gospel, aspires to be life-giving and life-changing both spiritually and practically. How wonderful is that! Bermudian Anglicans we have our work cut out for us.

While the bishops were working hard on various 'calls', the spouses had our own program and 500 of us were divided into small groups of eight to ten for bible study, reflection and prayer.

Small bible study group to which Fiona Dill was assigned.

Around the Diocese

Jesus is the same, yesterday and today and for ever. Apart from him, it seems that things are always changing. During this month we say goodbye to some, thanks to others and welcome to another.

After 40 years of faithful service to the Church in St George's, Mama Grace – or Lay Reader Grace Rawlins – has decided to retire from her regular Sunday ministry as a lay reader in St. Peter's Church. She has been a faithful, caring and endearing servant of the word and of the people – an eloquent speaker who combines her love for the Lord, for history and for the rich Bermudian heritage and culture to inspire and engender faith, with a twinkle in her eye and a smile upon her lips.

The oldest amongst the first cohort of the St. Mellitus students, she challenged them all with her engagement with New Testament Greek, whilst providing sage advice.

Such sage advice from a senior saint has also been the hall mark of Bermuda's oldest serving clergyman, Canon James W. Francis. In 2018, he stood down as long serving rector of Christ Anglican Church, only to pick up the mantle once again at St. Anne's Church, where he has faithfully served and encouraged as their interim rector for a number of years.

Now at 94, he still has a bounce in his step, but has decided that the time is ripe for the parish to move on as he steps aside at the end of August. During his time there he has been able to help the parish re-focus and grow in confidence and in numbers. We wish to thank him and pray every blessing in his retirement from St. Anne's but know that no-one every retires from the ministry.

It seems that retirement is in the air as the Rev. Tom Slawson and Sonja are to leave Bermuda towards the end of September as priest-in-charge of St. George's parish. Fr. Tom has offered safe and stable leadership, seeing the parish through some difficult times and enabling new lay leadership to come to the fore.

His carefully planned liturgies and encompassing style of shared leadership has helped the parish hold together and to dream of a new future. Sonja has also thrown herself into Bermudian life as both an author and participant within the deaf community. They leave for Biloxi, Mississippi to enjoy retirement closer to family. We thank them, too, for their faithful service to our church and island.

However, even as many are leaving and retiring, so it is our joy to welcome to Bermuda the Rev. Bryan Haigh, his wife Michelle and their children Nathan and Rachel. They will be filling Pembroke rectory with their young family as Bryan becomes Pembroke's next priest-in-charge.

Originally from South Africa, the family has been in Yellowknife, Canada. Bryan was installed at St. John's on September 6 at a special service.

He writes: "We appreciate your prayers for us as we eagerly anticipate what the Lord has in store for us and the parish of Pembroke as we join you to serve Him in Bermuda. Please pray with us that the Lord will enable us to settle in well and to always seek the honour and glory of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Cathedral a Beacon to Community

thedral of the Most Holy

Marjie and my move to the cathedral parish came with a few intentional objectives that had been clearly pointed out during the selection process. Among these, was the very intentional request that the Cathedral grow in its awareness of its place as a parish church, as the mother church of the diocese and as the 'house set on the hill', which allows its light to shine on all those around.

It was interesting to learn of the law that requires clear sight of the Cathedral from Harbour Road. There is an interesting analogy here that should not be missed.

The Psalmist wrote of looking to the hills around, from where his help would come (Psalm 121). Historically, this was a reminder that the Messiah they longed for, particularly when life was tough, would, apparently, first come to the mountain right outside the walls of the city of Jerusalem (the Mount of Olives by the way).

The mount, could be seen from everywhere in the city and it became a symbol of the ever present, ever powerful God who was their help in times of trouble.

It is my belief that our cathedral has this place on the islands of Bermuda. We are more than the mother church of the Anglican communion, we are the light on the hill for all residents of the islands to see and, consequently, to be a constant reminder of the presence and provision of our God.

Recognizing that the city of Hamilton is the gathering place for many in industry and commerce as well as government Monday through Friday, it is apparent that we need to be doing what we can while so many are so close to our campus.

We are taking the initiative this fall to invite the community to join us at noon hours to learn about the difference God can make in their lives.

For some time now the City Singers have been offering the opportunity for those who love to sing, to gather at noon on Tuesdays to do just that. Others gather occasionally just to listen to them.

The noon hour food program feeds over 100 persons daily and those in need know to "come to the cathedral on the hill in the center of the city".

Beginning in September, we are inviting women and men who work in the city to bring their lunch and study scripture together on Mondays, and there are plans to be offering an opportunity for those struggling with grief, as the result of the loss of a loved one, to gather in the nave one day a week to learn how to walk through the valley that has been clouded by the shadow of death.

Our goal is to identify the needs of the community and help equip the church through noon hour opportunities.

This is not about growing the Cathedral but about helping the church in Bermuda be equipped to live their faith and, when appropriate, to be inviting others who may not share our faith, to come and explore it. Among other things, it is my hope to offer the Christianity Explored course at noon hours as well.

I would also like to introduce an opportunity one noon hour a month, to look at some of the critical issues Christians face and how to find some resolve by using the tools we have been given by God.

Stay tuned for more to come!

One of the exciting things the Cathedral has already been doing – and I am thrilled to be part of it – is the offering of substantial scholarships to young people who are pursuing higher education after graduating high school.

Presently, we have four scholarship recipients attending college and university in both Canada and the UK.

What a great way to remind our parishioners of how much we support them. I am sure that they might also use our prayers so please add Olwyn Matthews, Ben Dill, Jacob Matthews and Miriam Dill to your daily prayer list.

There is a significant difference between a job and a vocation. We secure a job to provide for the physical needs we have to sustain life, but a vocation is that which generates passion from within to make a difference. Please pray that these students, and all of the children of the parish, might learn their vocation and consequently live meaningful and fulfilling lives.

I invite members of the whole diocese to pray daily for your cathedral. We want to be here to assist the church on the whole island so if there is any way we might be of assistance to you in your ministries please let us know.

There were two from Kenya, and others from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, England and the USA. (Please see photo on Page 4).

We all spoke English but other groups had translators: Spanish, Juba Arabic, Swahili, Japanese, Burmese, Hindi, French and many more.

The experience of standing shoulder to shoulder in a big circle each holding a candle, as we did at the end of the spouses' time together, with people from every nation, culture and tongue and singing praises to Jesus, was very moving and I often found myself in tears of thankfulness to God.

I could go on about the personal stories I heard of sacrifice and hardship that many of our sisters and brothers endure, or the opportunities I had for faith building, reflection and challenge, but I will save those for another day. I do want to thank you for your prayers for us during our time at Lambeth and I ask that you would continue to pray for direction and wisdom as I reflect on what God wants for me next in my role as bishop's wife.

Supportive Church Family

Pew to You at the Cathedral

The Cathedral will be offering the following opportunities for you to spend uplifting noon hours in the pew:

Mondays: (Sept. 12 to Oct. 31) 12:15 to 1 p.m., study of Paul's Epistle to the Philippians with Canon Jerry Smith

Tuesdays: (Starting Sept. 13) 12:30 to 1:15 p.m., City Singers

Wednesdays: 12:15 to 12:45 p.m., Holy Eucharist

Bring your lunch, find a pew and enjoy.

Last Sunday at the Cathedral, as we head off to university, my sister Miriam and I were prayed for by the cathedral congregation at the end of the service. It is her first year, while I am entering my second year. We both felt the love and support of the cathedral family for us – it is a lovely thing to be a part of a supportive church family.

But that support is not just in prayers and words – we are both recipients of the cathedral scholarship, which is a very important and practical support for us as we leave Bermuda. We are both grateful for this, as it helps us to continue in our studies and to have the privilege of a university education. Miriam is doing a degree in adult nursing at Derby University, and I am continuing with my degree in business management and marketing at the University of Western England, Bristol. I am looking forward to getting back to Bristol, where I will be moving into a house with some fellow students.

Last year, there were many modules that made up my course. The three that I found most interesting were, “Understanding Business and Financial Information”, “Understanding Organizations and People” and “Understanding the Principles of Marketing.” These three modules went into great depth and introduced me to many new theories and ideas. In particular, I enjoyed learning about marketing through the use of digital platforms, such as mobile phones and social media. I was surprised, not only by how huge that industry is, but also by how quickly it went from taking up only a small sector of the marketing business to becoming the most effective way for businesses to advertise.

Due to how interesting I found the course, I worked hard and was pleased with my results. Overall, it was a great learning experience, as I feel much more confident going forward. Learning more about the business world through my course gave me access to an internship at Chubb this summer – where I put my education to use in a dynamic team for two months. I can see how my studies assisted me to contribute to the insurance industry in Bermuda – which is exciting to me. But now it is back to university for a second year, and I am excited not just about my studies but to see friends and to get more involved in sports and student life. I am looking forward to being a part of the university tennis and badminton scene.

To sum this up, I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks to the Cathedral for providing the funding to allow me to have these experiences, as without them none of this would be possible. I couldn't have asked for a better introduction into the business world, and I plan to try my hardest, and present myself as best I can along my career path.

A Londoner in Hamilton

As an essential part of training for ordination in the Church of England, students have to experience a short-term placement in another Anglican context. London ordinand James Bunyan shares some reflections from a July placement at the Cathedral in Hamilton, Bermuda.

1. Heritage is a gift

"I am reminded of your sincere faith, which first lived in your grandmother Lois and in your mother Eunice and, I am persuaded, now lives in you also." 2 Timothy 1:5

It is very obvious that Bermuda has a great Christian heritage. Throughout the years, settlers and Bermudians have loved, worked and given so that people would hear about Jesus and churches would be filled. Although the culture is perhaps beginning to shift, Christianity still feels relevant, with church attendance normal on a Sunday or for significant life events.

One aspect of this is that the Anglican Church has some of the best real estate on the island. Most of the parish churches I visited sit in large compounds with space for offices, gardens, vicarages, halls and cemeteries. But I am not just talking size; churches are well placed to reach out. The Cathedral is unmissable everywhere in Hamilton. You drive anywhere westward and you pass by the spire of St Paul's, Paget. The steps of St Peter's loom over the old town of St George's. The beautifully painted St Monica's, Pembroke lies on a hill in the heart of a residential community and worshippers walk out of church to look out over the ocean, just as they do at St. James', Sandys. The church lies at the heart of Bermudian community.

All these resources and all this heritage give the Anglican Church real opportunity to connect with people. How can we not use our resources and heritage as a platform to speak of God's love in Jesus?

2. Precious diversity is hard won

"There before me was a great multitude that no one could count, from every nation, tribe, people and language, standing before the throne." Revelation 7:9.

It is very easy to have monochrome churches where everyone looks the same but this is never the ideal. Obviously, Bermuda is a diverse society and I was looking forward to observing how this diversity plays out in the church. I was not disappointed! It seems that the most diverse churches on the island were Anglican, with people black and white worshipping and leading side by side as brothers and sisters in Christ, whether amongst the clergy, at a vestry meeting or at Sunday service.

Walter Carlington took an avid interest in the once-in-a-lifetime reconstruction of the cathedral's copper roof in 2002.

He committed to climb up to the top of the cathedral tower, twice weekly, to capture the process.

He was grateful to the church leadership, family and contractor support in his endeavor. He is sharing with us some of his discoveries.

This Old Church

Trinity Anglican Cathedral

The beginning: Trinity Church, Chapel of Ease, today known as The Cathedral of The Most Holy Trinity

In the year 1790, a decision was made to move the seat of The Government of Bermuda, from the town of St. George. A central location was chosen: Hamilton, in the parish of Pembroke. The town needed a cathedral and St John's parish church was small. It was enlarged twice, but was still not suitable, so a decision was made to build another church, closer to the town.

A race ensued between Hamilton and St. George as to who could have a cathedral built to meet the 1815 deadline. St. George built the stone structure on the hill, known as the unfinished church, while in Hamilton, land lots No. 45, 47, 49, 51, 53 and later lot No. 43 made the church lot measure 300 feet on Church Street, and 144 feet, north and south. A large wooden church, was built on this site, consecrated by Bishop Fields and, in 1855, Hamilton won the rights to become the seat of government.

In January of 1884, the wooden church on this site was destroyed by fire. The name of the church was Trinity Church, or in some quarters, The Chapel of Ease.

In the year 1885, a decision was made to tear down and rebuild a new church made of stone. Thus, work to this end began.

Plans for the new church, drawn up by architect William Hay, were accepted, but that caused a major problem. The ground was too soft to support the proposed structure, so a lot of earth removal had to take place to reach bedrock.

The New Trinity Church

In the year 1886, work began on the present-day structure, and was completed in 1905, with a red, tiled roof. The red roof was damaged over a period of time with storms that passed over Bermuda. In 1927, Patterson and Small of Scotland replaced the tile with a red, copper roof that lasted for 75 years.

This Old Church cont'd

In 1885, the ruins of Trinity church were removed. Work began on an early English design by architect William Hay of Edinburgh, on what is known today as the Cathedral of the Most Holy Trinity. (the church name was changed from Trinity Church to the Cathedral of the Most Holy Trinity, in the year 1919).

On May 1, 1886, Bishop Llewelyn Jones laid the foundation stone. On July 9, of 1886, the cornerstone was laid.

In 1894, by act of the Bermuda Legislature, the church under construction was given the status of, "the Cathedral Church of the Diocese of Bermuda".

In 1905, the cornerstone for the tower was laid. The tower rises to a height of 143' and there are 155 steps to the top.

On May 11, 1911, on St. Thomas Day, after 26 years of construction, Bishop Jones consecrated the completed church.

In 1956, the roof of the Cathedral of the Most Holy Trinity needed work. The original roof of the cathedral was a red, tiled roof. That roof was damaged by successive hurricanes. It was decided to replace that roof with a roof made of copper. Patterson & Small of Scotland was contracted to install the new roof.

In 2002, Heather & Little, a roofing company out of Ontario Canada, was contracted to replace the copper roof.

There is only one building in Bermuda that has a copper roof. The replacing of the copper roof on the Cathedral is an historic event. After the removal of the old copper, a green weather resistant membrane known as "roof shield" is placed over the exposed wood. This membrane is held in place with tapered wooden battens that themselves are held in place with flathead 2 ½" long Robinson-drive stainless screws.

(I would like to thank Bishop Ewen Ratter-ay, Canon Keith Wassall, my wife Delores and family, for their help and encouragement. Cameron Forbes, vice President of Heather & Little Ltd., Ron Pye foreman, Brian Lovesey, Neil Kingston, and the rest of the coppersmiths for the technical information provided.)

Cutlines:

The panels, old and new, are 20 ounces per square foot. The old panels are 26 inches wide, while the new ones are 20.5 inches in width. Narrowing the gauge makes them stronger and less inclined to flap in the wind.

This diversity is no accident! The Gospel calls diverse peoples to come together as the family of God, so it has to be carefully fostered. Led by Bishop Nick and the Racial Justice Committee, churches are working hard to be welcoming to everyone as they fulfil the excellent Racial Justice Charter, a copy of which is in every parish church. I would love it if the Anglican Church in England copied this move. Of course, I am sure this diversity is not yet perfect. But the progress was hugely encouraging and, as people see that the Christian family has room for everyone, it is a great witness to Jesus' power to unite.

3. The family of God is real

"You are no longer foreigners and strangers but fellow citizens with God's people and also members of his household." Ephesians 2:19

If Lois and I were nervous about living on the other side of the Atlantic for a month, we needn't have been; we were so warmly welcomed by the Christians we met. Wherever we met, people were keen to ask our story or share theirs. People bought me lunch, offered me lifts, gave me their time. When I was privileged to preach in the Cathedral one Sunday, the congregation was hugely encouraging to this young plonker who couldn't get the microphone to work. I don't think this was entirely down to the natural warmth of Bermudians; there was a real sense that we were amongst family, even as we were far away from "home."

4. Reaching the next generation is a challenge.

"Teach [the Good News] to your children and to their children after them." Deuteronomy 4:9

While there was plenty to celebrate in the Anglican Church in Bermuda, one thing I noticed was a little concerning; there were very few young people in many of the churches I visited. Indeed, there seemed to be a lack of people under the age of 30, a lack of obvious youth work and, most concerning, little intentional ministry to try and bridge this gap, with many of the services feeling very traditional. While Christian heritage is a gift, it would be utterly tragic if this was not passed onto the next generation.

Although I am a mere student, this seemed to me to be the most pressing challenge facing the Anglican church. Without making efforts to reach the next generation, the Anglican Church will disappear from the island within a few decades.

This challenge is nothing new. Throughout history the church has faced the need to reach the next generation and has always done so.

The good news of Jesus contains everything we need to win young people; hope, joy, purpose, identity! The only thing we need to add is the willingness to sacrifice time, effort and comfort for the sake of others.

We are all in need of contact with and encouragement from each other as a family of parishes.

The purpose of this newsletter is to provide a platform for increased communication with each other. The tone will be conversational.

As well as Bishop Nick's message and important directives, we want to hear from you. We welcome submissions of photos and briefs about activities and accomplishments in your parishes.

Each month we will also feature a different parish with messages from your priest-in-charge and correspondents' contributions that will focus on key people and insights from within your walls.

The bishop has designated an east-to-west order in which we will feature the parishes. They are as follows:

- September, the Cathedral
- October, St. George's
- November, Holy Trinity

- December, St. Mark's
- January, Christ Church
- February, Pembroke
- March, St. Paul's
- April, St. Mary's
- May, St. Anne's
- June, St. James

The cycle will restart with the Cathedral in July 2023, and there will be no newsletter in August.
